The World Project Group (WPG), an international group of independent companies, held a key conference in Doha hosted by Qatar Navigation.

WPG announced its appointment as agent for EurIndia, a ship owner of geared vessels with lifting capacity up to 160 tonnes and specialising in the movement of project materials from Europe (Antwerp, Hamburg and Genoa) to the Middle East, according to a report in The Peninsula.

T Rieke, managing partner of Antwerp Shipping & Chartering NV: 'We would like to appoint individual members of the WPG in Dubai, Abu Dhabi, Dammam and Kuwait as per introduction received to act as liner agents for our service to the Arabian Gulf under our Brand EurIndia Lines'.

WPG is embarking on a plan to improve its material management system and has initiated a strategy to provide detailed online materials management down to the line item level to their customers.

WPG is owned by its members equally and not by a person or group of persons with their own agenda. Board members are elected every two years and are tasked with securing qualified members enhancing business for its members through shared experience, organising annual meetings and other activities as directed by the members.

Current president of WPG board, Robert Vermetten, of Transport and Project Logistics (TPL), Antwerp, Belgium, presided over the Doha meet, which was the second annual convention.

WPG specialises in transporting materials to support projects around the world for a number of industries, including oil and gas, power, water treatment and mining.

WPG's special focus is on industries where the complexity requires specialised knowledge, meeting of tight time schedules and flexibility. Over 25 companies representing 50 countries and employing around a 1,000 professionals, are part of WPG.
